About Gary

Gary Bridgens helps independent power producers, public utilities, manufacturers, and other regulated entities navigate complex regulatory matters before state and federal authorities, including the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, the Department of Energy, state public service commissions, and federal courts considering appeals from administrative agency proceedings.

Prior to joining Bracewell, Gary was an associate attorney at a national law firm and completed an internship with American Fuel & Petrochemical Manufacturers. Before law school, Gary advised Fortune 500 corporations and industry-leading trade associations on public affairs and political communications strategy.
