

The Tinubu Presidency and Nigeria's Energy Challenges

Media Mentions

March 02, 2023 | Energy Voice | 1 minute read | London

Bracewell's Adam Blythe told Energy Voice that the energy industry would welcome Bola Tinubu as the new president of Nigeria.

"Tinubu represents something of a continuity candidate and he has indicated a willingness to continue to implement the [Petroleum Industry Act] PIA," said Blythe. "While there is a wider election process still to run and be completed, a Tinubu presidency may increase the chance of ministerial consents being issued for upstream M&A deals during the upcoming 'lame duck' period."

Nigeria's Independent National Electoral Commission (INEC) declared Tinubu had won on March 1, seeing off competition from 17 other presidential candidates.

Click here to read more from Energy Voice.

Related People

Adam Blythe

Partner

LONDON

+44.(0).207.448.4247

adam.blythe@bracewell.com

Related Industries

Energy

Related Practices

Oil & Gas

Upstream Transactions