

INSIGHTS

New Congress Expected to Meet Pent Up Demand for Energy Oversight

November 17, 2010

By: Frank V. Maisano

Pent up demand for oversight on both sides of the political aisle will drive a trend for renewed Congressional oversight in the upcoming term in 2011, notably in the energy and environmental sectors. In a recent video interview, Scott Segal, head of the Government Relations and Strategic Communications practices at Bracewell & Giuliani in Washington, D.C., discusses the prospects renewed Congressional oversight and why it's important.